Gits says: During the days of British rule in India, Dal Makhani found favor with the connoisseurs of food - the Mughals and the Nawabs. A blend of black gram, Bengal gram and red kidney beans are cooked on a slow charcoal fire for up to 16 hours and then delicately tempered and seasoned with exotic spices and light cream.

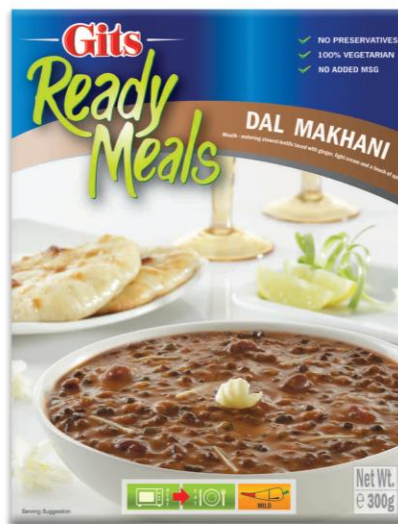

Andrew says: I love lentil soups and i love kidney beans and I love Indian food. So here's an Indian lentil soup with kidney beans. Is then any chance I won't love this?

Well, if there was a chance, It was a tiny one. This is a fantastic dish executed excellently by Gits. It's like regular lentil soup if lentil soup had a lot more spice and life to it. There are little strands of ginger, onions, a touch of garlic chilies, coriander, cumin and FenuGREEK leave: all dancing together In a dark reddish, creamy ballroom of flavor.

And it really Is surprisingly creamy. The third ingredient listed is cream and it really provides a nice, smooth, almost cheesy base for the spice and beans. It helps bring all the flavors together on the palate rather than having them hit at different times. I really enjoy that effect.

The packaging says Dal Makhani is India's favorite lentil dish and I must say it's already mine as well. But because I'm white, I rarely have flatbread on hand to enjoy a soup like this with (not that it NEEDS the bread, but it always helps), so I got out my bag of Santitas white corn tortilla chips and dunked away. It was delightful! The fusion of Mexican and Indian cuisine. sounds like a recipe for a long stay on the toilet, but I think this works anyway. Wait until they hear about this in Mumbai!

*When i sent Andrew food he did not kow which items were free from producers and which were ones I'd purchased. -Ed.

Gits says: A very popular vegetable curry made of a combination of fenugreek leaves, green peas & fresh cream. And much liked by connoisseurs. Along with the aromatic taste of the fenugreek leaves and the green peas, the natural delicate flavors of Methi Matar are enhanced by a subtle aroma of spices and seasonings. Its slightly chewing consistency creating a dish which is as tasty as it is wholesome.

Andrew says: A few weeks ago, if you would have told me I could eat delicious Indian food out of a non-refrigerated silver pouch, I'd have told you to take your lies elsewhere. Now, though, I know this is no lie.

I'd never had Methi Matar before I ate this, but I feel well-versed enough in the Indian spice set to tell you this is a very authentic tasting dish. I get the feeling, due to its simplicity, that this is a dish meant as a side, or as one in a series of savory, soupy concoctions to greedily sop up with flat bread, but even alone, it's wonderful.

The fenugreek leaves (the methi) add kind of a bitterness, but the peas (the matar) are sweet. There's cumin and cinnamon, there's clove and nutmeg. It's a cornucopia of wonderful flavors. And I can read all the ingredients on the back of the box. Oh yeah, it's all natural, kids! All in a space-age silver pouch.

The peas make up the bulk of the body here, and they're just fine. I happen to love peas, so, you know, this is a good deal. The whole dish is a deeper green than pea green, but the flavor is somewhat orange, if you get my meaning. It's spicy and warm and it warms you up with its flavor. You could eat it straight with a spoon (as I was part of the time, for scientific purposes), but it really cries out for some kind of bread medium. I had the last bit of it with some crusty, locally made artisan bread due to a lack of naan in my home and it was good even with that.

If you can find this in the imported food/ethnic cuisine section of your local market and you're down with tasty Indian dishes, give it a shot. You don't even need freezer space!

READY-COOKED VEGETARIAN CURRIES VERSATILE AND EASY

WELCOME to the world of effortless cooking, certainly convenient and easy. You can now serve your family and guests a range of ready-cooked vegetarian curries without the hassle of soaking dried beans and lentils or boiling up litres of milk to make paneer (homemade cheese). My colleagues and I compared the most popular of the range available under various brand names at local spice shops. Vegetarians will agree that the red-beans curry and Paneer Makhani are the popular choices for special occasions. However, not all the brands will win you compliments with the heat-and-eat range, as we found. These curries may be used as "extenders" by adding to other vegetables like potatoes, brinjals.

DEBBIE NAIDU'S TASTING

Brand: Tastic
Product: Kashmiri Rajma Curry
Comment: Lots of small-sized and slightly mushy beans in a smooth, bland, mild curry. Good for the uninitiated curry eater
Rating: 6/10

Brand: MTR
Product: Rajma Masala.
Comment: Enough good-sized beans in proportion to the gravy, but the beans need more cooking. Although the curry has a thick consistency it is salty with a hot, peppery taste. Not advisable for those not used to hot curry.
Rating: 4/10

Brand: Gits
Product: Rajma Masala
Comment: Good gravy consistency but far few beans. Well-flavoured curry, appealing in colour and taste. Would make an appetizing bunny-chow filling.
Rating: 8/10

Brand: RASM
Product: Lucknowi Rajma Masala
Comment: large, firm, chunky beans that need more cooking. Thick, dark gravy. Too much cinnamon.
Rating: 4/10

Brand: MTR
Product: Paneer Makhani
Comment: Rather small, comparatively few pieces of paneer in a creamy, spicy & ome with hint of butter.
Rating: 6/10

Brand: Tastic
Product: Paneer Makhani Curry
Comment: Good-sized pieces of paneer in a flavourful tomato sauce, Good value.
Rating: 8/10

ASHA MAHARAJ'S TASTING

Brand: Tastic
Product: Kashmiri Rajma Curry
Comment: The beans seen to be overcooked and appear to be a bit mushy. With a strong tomato base, the curry still tasted quite bland.
Rating: 5/10

Brand: MTR
Product: Rajma Masala
Comment: Salty, undercooked beans, sour and peppery
Rating: 4/10

Brand: Gits
Product: Rajma Masala
Comment: Visually very appealing, well balanced, spicy flavour.
Rating: 8/10

Brand: RASM
Product: Lucknowi Rajma Masala
Comment: The beans are hard and seedy, over powering cinnamon flavour
Rating: 5/10

Brand: MTR
Product: Paneer Makhani
Comment: The proportion of paneer to sauce is not sufficient. Very mild with onion and ginger flavour, mainly with soft diced paneer- about eight pieces.
Rating: 6/10

Brand: Tastic
Product: Paneer Makhani Curry
Comment: Very satisfying and tasty, creamy tomato base. Dark and rich in colour and texture. Although a bit rubbery, there were 17 chunky cubes of paneer.
Rating: 8/10

ASHA MAHARAJ

DEBBIE NAIDU

SUBASHNI NAIDOO

SUBASHNI NAIDOO'S TASTING

Brand: Tastic
Product: Kashmiri Rajma Curry
Comment: The beans in this curry were overcooked to such an extent that the curry was mushy. It is a very mild bean curry which lacked pungency and flavour. The curry also dark brown in colour and not visually appealing. I would certainly not serve this as a family meal without adding more curry powder and chilli.
Rating: 5/10

Brand: MTR
Product: Rajma Masala
Comment: This curry had a better appearance, but the beans were hard, undercooked and difficult to chew. Definitely a no-no for me. The colour of the curry is slightly richer than Tastic, however, the gravy is dominated by a strong pepper taste. The curry is also a bit too salty.
Rating: 4/10

Brand: Gits
Product: Rajma Masala
Comment: This curry definitely tops the list with its rich red colour and well-cooked beans. This is a very tasty bean curry that is well-balanced, full of flavour and visually appealing. But it still does not beat the traditional sugar beans curry made from scratch — boiled, braised and garnished.
Rating: 7.5/10

Sunday Times Extra food columnist ASHA MAHARAJ & panelists SUBASHNI NAIDOO & DEBBIE NAIDU conducted a test-taste of ready-to-eat vegetarian curries. They based their findings on taste, consistency & visual appeal.

Brand: Rasm
Product: Lucknowi Rajma Masala
Comment: The presentation did not appeal to me. The gravy and beans were dark brown in colour and excessive amount of mustard seeds. Beans in this curry were also undercooked with an over-powering cinnamon taste. This curry could be used as an add on to a trotters curry
Rating: 4/10

Brand: MTR
Product: Paneer Makhani
Comment: This curry has a creamy texture with a good-tasting gravy. The paneer cubes were highly disappointing, with just eight mushy cubes. There is far too little paneer pieces in this meal. But overall, the gravy is well-spiced and tasty.
Rating: 6/10

Brand: Tastic
Product: Paneer Makhani Curry
Comment: This meal is definitely good value for money. It has 17 firm paneer cubes in a rich and attractive gravy. The ghee melts in the dish when heated, giving the meal a good consistency. The sauce has a creamy and spicy tomato flavour and tastes great.
Rating: 7/10

Consumer Testimonials

What people are saying about our products

Dear Sir,
I was pleasantly surprised to see GITS Ready Made Food when i moved into my apartment complex in Philadelphia. It was available at the local grocery store!!

Although I do admit I was skeptical at the start, I have absolutely fallen in love with your food. Its reached a point where need to control myself from eating ONLY GITS food, I would especially recommend the Paneer Tikka and Paneer Makhani to everyone.

You couldn't have done a better on their taste. Its perfect!

Thank you for making my Indian dream come true.
Regards,
Aakarsh.

Hi,
I am an Indian staying overseas from last 8 years. I am foreign national now and will not return to India. I tried many "Ready to Eat" food from various companies. All of them are either make my stomach upset, not the right taste or too much spicy.

How can you make such excellent "Ready to Eat" products. I always have night mare if Gits will stop or reduce the quality of "Ready to Eat" food products.

Gits is excellent. Please keep the good work. Also, please make address for feedback. Feedback is important to improve the quality. Quality is infinity. So, please create feedback address so that your well wishers like me do not use your export e-mail address to provide feedback. Thanks. Have a nice day!

Warmest regards,

Dear Gits:

I am a huge fan of Indian food, but my all time favorite dish has to be Palak Paneer. I usually go to my favorite restaurant or make it myself. Well last night I was having a craving for my favorite Indian dish, so I just headed to my local Indian grocer. I've never bought packaged pre-made Palak Paneer, so I bought every brand there (there were 4 brands) not knowing which one would be best. Well you will be happy to know that yours won hands down. The Gits brand was absolutely delicious! The others were barely edible unfortunately. Your brand tasted as close to homemade as you can get and I was super happy. I'm going to go back and buy a case of the stuff as soon as I get a chance.

Thank you so much!!

Hello - I am an Indian guy living in Switzerland and I regularly use GITS products, which I found to be very xauthentic tasting Indian food products. Today I tried the Veg. Biryani for the first time and I found it to be delicious and of high quality (made me remember the taste of my hometown -hyderabadi-biryani). My congratulations to all you guys at GITS for keeping the taste authentic and make us feel good. Keep up the excellent work and tradition.

Thank You

I purchased a few of your Heat and Eat products yesterday. I never expect much from a pre-packaged meal because my history with them has been one of under-salted, under-seasoned mushy food that looked as unappealing as it tasted. But I was pleasantly surprised.

The food was delicious. with proper levels of salt and seasonings that were expressive and well-balanced. The vegetables and paneer, were firm to the bite, with Just as much texture as I would expect from restaurant-prepared dishes served immediately after cooking. And the food was bright and appealing to the eye as well. You have succeeded in producing a high quality product that exceeds my expectations. and because of this I will always keep Gits products stocked in my pantry.

Would you please spread my most sincere thanks to all the workers and Quality control managers who are responsible for producing

Dear Sir,

I have no words to express my appreciation of your policy of customer response. In one word , I can call it "EXCELLELENT". I was very happy when your Q A Manager , Ms.Taiyaba (please pardon spelling error, if any) called me up this morning in USA all the way from India !!!

Without blaming us, she explained to me in detail what could have gone wrong while making the Khaman Dhoklas at our end.

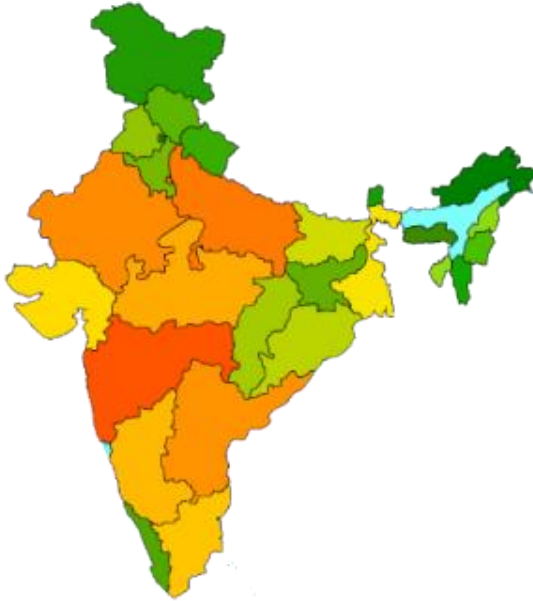

You have a very large product range and We do regularly use your various products which are available in USA . Barring an exception like this episode, we are quite very much satisfied with your products. Keep it up.

Thanking you,
